WASHINGTON, Oct. 20.—Norman Davis' blunt-worded statement that the United States would keep out of the row with Germany was dictated by President Roosevelt himself. . . . Davis had been in the European fight up to the hilt, had been bringing pressure upon Germany, acting as general go-between.

His old Tennessee friend, Cordell Hull, steeped in the traditions of Woodrow Wilson, was inclined to go along with him. But Roosevelt late one night, sent for Hull and ordered a policy of complete aloofness from Europe. . . . One man who applied to Secretary Ickes for a Public Works loan wanted to put up as security three elephants. He had a circus he wanted to rehabilitate. . . . General Charles M. Saltzman, new Commissioner of the Shipping Board, has been trying to discover what are the duties of George Christian, former secretary to President Hardin. Every morning he goes in to ask Christian what his duties are but never finds him in.

Various reports are circulating regarding the future set-up of the NRA. Some report spreaders are those who would pull the Recovery Administration to pieces. . . . There is a definite campaign on to divide the NRA between other government departments. The Federal Trade Commission may take over the enforcement of codes. Miss Perkins' Labor Department might take over the arbitration of labor disputes. Secretary Rosen would like to get some of the NRA functions for his Commerce Department. . . . It all depends on whether or not General Johnson stays on. He and Roosevelt are now getting on much better. . . . George Washington Hill, head of the American Tobacco Company, maker of "Lucky Strikes," will only smoke his own cigarettes. Visiting at Warm Springs last winter, Roosevelt inadvertently offered him an "Old Gold." Hill declined.

UNWILLING

Mrs. John F. Amherst Cooil, the former Cornell Vanderbilt, has gone abroad, leaving her husband living in the gardeners' cottage on Blithmore, the Vanderbilt's palatial North Carolina estate. . . . She is going to test her father's will to see if her husband has to stay there. . . . The reason he is staying there is because under the Before Police Judge C. A. Odeff, the city jail when they appeared.

"Our main point now is to get the fleet out," he said. "We hope to get the fleet up to full treaty strength by the time the treaty expires in 1936. Forty-four ships are now under construction, and besides these we need 104 more. Many of these are replacements."

The government plans to distract as much construction as possible events between Bremerton and Mare Island. Pacific coast naval yards, the secretary said.

The government has to spend money on its navy now because other nations are doing it, Swanson said. He declared that this country's hope to attain equality in naval strength by reduction of armaments had failed through the building activities of other nations.

"We are not building against any other nation," he said. "We are building because we have the right to. The British at present are hot off anyone, and if they continue at their present schedule they will be up to treaty strength by 1936. But we are not trying to race them."

The arrests were made on orders of Police Chief L. E. Jones who has started a "clean-up" drive of unlicensed peddlers.

EGAN GOES TO HIS DEATH WITH SMILE

SAN QUENTIN PRISON, Calif., Oct. 20—UP—Dallas Egan, California's strangest murderer went calmly to his death on the gallows here today. He was sober despite a grant of all the whisky he wanted.

Three men fainted as the 38 year old lover of poetry and fine arts, yet cold blooded remorseless slayer, expiated the murder of an aged man in Los Angeles during the Olympic games.

His only companion was a small bottle of Bourbon whisky. Governor James Rolph, Jr., ordered the whisky at Egan's request.

Two hours before his execution he took a drink. He said he didn't want to "go out swatted." As guards led him from the cell he looked at the bottle. A drink remained in it. He made as though to reach for it, then turned and walked away with steady tread.

The condemned man wore a black suit, white open neck shirt and carpet slippers as he left his cell for the last time.

When guards opened his door he was cracking a phonograph given him the night before. A record started wailing a blues song about: "I'd Sweet as apple cider."

"I want to dance out on that tune," said Egan, smiling.

As he strode down the corridor the tune dragged, grated squawkily and stopped. A guard had turned off the machine.

Unaided by guards Egan sprang up the 13 steps to the scaffold, taking them two at a time. Guards were outdistanced.

To the last he refused services of a Catholic priest and Protestant minister.

"I don't believe in the hereafter, he had told them. "I've gone through life this far alone. I guess I'll go the route the same way."

The trap was sprung at 10:01 a.m. less than a minute after he entered the death chamber. At 10:17 he was pronounced dead.

Guards applied ice water and resuscitatives to three men in the crowd of 50 that watched the execution.

Egan had directed that his body be given to the University of California Medical department. He said he had no relatives.

"Egan was the calmest man in the history of the death house," said Dr. Stanley.

The man's deliberately chosen career of crime started in 1914. He served terms in San Quentin and Folsom prisons. In them he read much, wrote poetry and formed a dualistic philosophy of life that was as cold-blooded as his crimes.

He was holding up a jewelry store in Los Angeles when William Kirkpatrick, wealthy resident of Battle Creek, Mich., entered to set his watch. Partially deaf, Kirkpatrick disregarded Egan's command to raise his hands. Egan shot and the aged man dropped dead.

Egan was captured after a bank robbery in which two companions were killed. At his trial he dramatically interrupted proceedings and pleaded guilty. He asked for death. A week ago he wrote the governor and requested that no executive meeting be called for him.

Speaking Of Sports

MEXICO CITY (UPI)—The international sport of the United States is becoming one of the major sports of Mexico as the baseball season here approaches a climax.

Leading up to the visit late this month of the Major League All-Stars, the Aztecas, Mexico's only class A club, has been undergoing a warming-up campaign with visiting teams clubs from the United States. The attendance at these games has left little doubt as to the strong hold baseball has on Mexico.

As soon as the minor leagues season ended in the United States, the first American club visited Mexico. The visitors were the Fort Worth Cats of the Texas League led by Jake Arrieta, one of the game's best known players and former star of the old Chicago White Sox. The "Hustle Wonder" Fort Worth had come through a rather difficult road to success but held a world record in having won seven consecutive meetings prior to the visit of the Aztecas.

American teams, a few, have largely been impressed by the fitness of Mexican fans. Calm in their demeanor, they are enthusiastic in their approval of the game and without a trace of partisanship. A good day is a good day to them and Americans are cheered as heartily as Mexicanas are upon the execution of a skillful maneuver.

Mexicans Win Series

The reputation failed to carry over the Aztecas, who set about doing their business like job of taking seven games out of 11 played.

TWO FILMS ON DOUBLE BILL AT LOCAL FOX

"I Loved A Woman," which opens on a program with Laurel and Hardy in their latest comedy "Playhouse," and special Fox newsreels of the St. Louis vs. Indianapolis of Southern California football game. The triple bill begins at the Fox theatre tomorrow. Edward G. Robinson stars in "I Loved A Woman" as a man who has been banished from the screen for his role completely dissimilar to any of his previous successes.

"I Loved A Woman" is the final comedy of David Copper's novel "Red Menace," featuring Kay Francis opposite Robinson. His force of will is the motivator that makes his character work.

Besides Miss Francis and Robinson, the cast of "I Loved A Woman" includes Constance Bennett in "Bed of Roses," you'll know what she means.

Being a creature of determination, she came to Hollywood with a pledge made to herself that she wouldn't stay unless "somewhere." She still has a month left, so it would appear now there is nothing more for her to worry about.

Additionally, she has quite a sense of the commercial. She owns a hotel in downtown Hollywood, and made it her headquarters until her screen career was assured. But she had to move out.

"You see, I found I had to have some sleep," she explained. "They started putting up a new building across the street, and I guess they were in a big hurry because they worked nights on it."

The sad ending is that the day after Pert moved into a horrid mansion in the Hollywood hills, workmen began building a house next door.

Your Good HEALTH

By CLAUD N. CHRISMAN, M.D.

Cartooning the Doctor May Be Funny, But He Is a Human Being

LATELY a newspaper cartoon which created quite a little comment. Almost a dozen persons spoke to me about it, remarking that it was only too true.

The first picture depicted a man telephoning while a clock on the wall pointed to midnight. His wife is leaning over him and remarking, "Tell the doctor to come right away. Juvenile has a spasm."

The next picture depicted the same man at his desk with his wife and small son sitting in the room. The man has opened a letter which he tosses aside remarking, "Oh, it is only the bill from the doctor; let him wait."

IT unfortunately is true in too many instances and most frequently from those who could pay promptly without any hardship. There is an old rhyme that formerly appeared in many physicians' offices. It read:

"God and the doctor we alike adore,
On the brink of danger, not before,
The danger past, both are re-quited;
God is forgotten, the doctor slighted."

WE are all human, as is danger is present. We feel and act as though nothing would be too great a sacrifice for us to pay to have the danger removed, but only a short time afterward, we forget and the danger seems to have been much exaggerated in our minds. Did the doctor demand his pay at that time, we might pay but later we would feel that he was a bit hasty, though when the emergency payment, we think it is all right. We look at the doctor's bill and think it large.

THERE is an unjustified impression that all doctors have large incomes. We forget that about a third of the people he sees and serves can only pay a small fee, hardly more than enough to cover his expense of car and medicine. Another third of them can't pay anything. The professional expenses are large and constant; the income is erratic. Your doctor, human and his human frailties. Whether you do or do not pay promptly, he usually comes to you and renders you service; but when he knows you will pay soon he is likely to make haste to come and unconsciously he will give you better care and attention.

HE will not intentionally slight anyone, but he can't help being favorably inclined to you who pay. I personally find that most of my patients are anxious to pay me. I am to have them pay. Sickness is always unexpected and seldom is considered as a family budget, so it is almost come out of something else that you thought you must have. Beyond paying promptly you can do much more to help the doctor. When you and you cannot pay promptly, if you will go to him and tell him to make him your confidant you will do him a world of good.

If you ignore him, he will not know what to think. Then when he has carried you and yours through a serious sickness and you feel that he has rendered you good service, go and tell him how you feel. You have no idea how much good it will do him. Remember he is always lifting an uphill battle and likes to be told he has made a good fight. If you are not satisfied, tell him so honestly. Again it will help him and you, and you will both be better for the confidence.

IF you or yours are not feeling well during the day, call him; don't wait until six o'clock. A special trip must be made. It will take an hour, and you may spend a whole evening of enjoyment for him in making him do what could be done as well and better in 20 minutes during the day. Think of your doctor as a human being who needs sleep and food and recreation and some time and enjoyment with his family. Then such a cartoon as I mentioned will not be made public.

Baby's Toys

The instinct of a baby is to put everything into its mouth. A mother should choose for its toys that are smooth, that can be easily washed and kept clean, toys without loose parts that may be detached and swallowed.

HEALTHY FEET TEND TO MAKE BODY GRACEFUL

By JACQUELINE HUNT

TO be truly attractive you must give the impression of light, natural, easy grace. Well-groomed feet with straight toes make for light steps and a graceful manner. Pretty feet are always admired, but they need not be tiny. They should be in proportion to your figure, so you can move in them more elegantly and without effort and exercise.

Whenever foot deformity is mentioned, we immediately associate with it. Shoes that do not fit are eye-provokers. They bind the feet in some places, rub them in others or bind the ankles so that the feet cause you a great deal of pain. Tight-fitting shoes cause wrinkles other than any other than they cause serious internal disorders and painful blemishes on the feet themselves.

Selecting the right shoes does not mean that they must be broad and ugly, but it does mean that they must not cramp the foot in such a way that the toes can't be pulled back or wiggled forward. Above all, guard against a shoe that is too short. Such a shoe bends the great toe, the joint becomes enlarged, inflamed and sometimes a painful bunion results.

Your shoes must be long enough to allow the great toe to keep its straight forward position so that it may act as a lever in moving the body forward. Shoes with straight inner lines will help prevent this common deformity. If your foot has suffered a lot from improper shoes, it is a good idea to go to a specialist and have him recommend corrective exercises and give you a proper fitting. If your arches are weak, you must pay special attention to your walk, toes in, always, and take exercises on the supports. Corrective exercises are preferable.

Aside from comfortable shoes, your feet will appreciate proper care. One rule is to relax your feet by changing your hose and shoes at least once during the day. Perspiration is also a problem if you must be on your feet all day in a hot, stuffy house, and you should do what you can to relieve it. Bathe your feet once or twice a day in warm water, then plunge them quickly into cold water. Follow this with a brisk rub with common table salt; rinse again and dry thoroughly.

If swelling occurs, try this lotion which is soothing and will help reduce both the swelling and the amount of perspiration.

Mix together two capsules of witch hazel, a half ounce of alum, one ounce tanning and about six ounces of oil of aloë. If your feet are dreadfully tan-skinned and sensitive, then use warm olive oil, a rich cream or non-drying hand lotion instead of above. Camphor ice is also soothing to tired, swollen feet.

After your nightly foot bath place the thumb firmly on the arch and massage the foot with firm, rotary movements with all of the fingers. Your feet will respond quickly to this care and often at home before you start out—whether you is to be a combination of the two methods—part of the items prepared at home and part cooked or reheated over the campfire. In either case you will probably want a roaring fire to warm chilly fingers, and a bed of coals for toasting sandwiches or marshmallows.

Choose a sunny day and a good picnic spot for spreading the feast. And take along the things that are easiest to prepare. If there are men along, you might let them take charge of the broiling of the steak or frying the bacon and eggs. Most men like to display their skill at camp cooking, although at home cooking wouldn't interest them at all.

Mexican Sandwiches

You will like the hot sandwich spread used for Mexican sandwiches. Take along big buttered buns and let each person toast his bun over hot coals before adding the hot spread if he wishes. For sufficient mixture for twelve large buns, fry one-half pound of bacon in a frying pan until crisp. Remove and drain off half of the bacon fat. In that that remains, brown three-fourths of a cup of shredded dried beef. Add three-fourths cup hot chili sauce, then one-half cup grated American cheese and stir until the cheese is melted. Add one-third cup of sweet relish, pickles, a little over tightly and wrap well so the filling will stay hot until you reach the picnic grounds. Spread between buttered buns—toasted or not as you wish.

Picnic Desserts

HOT FOOD AIDS AUTUMN PICNIC

By JUDITH WILSON

THOSE who love picnics will not be daunted by the frosty weather of October. As a matter of fact autumn is an ideal time for outdoor feasts. The days are snappier to be sure, but you needn't worry about sunburns; the foliage is never more gorgeous than it is right now, and best of all, most of summer insects are gone, so you needn't worry about ants in your coffee or other crawling flying creatures.

Plan Picnic Meal

The first thing to decide is just what kind of a meal your picnic is to be. You will probably want the meal to be a hot one, but you will have to decide whether you will cook your steak, or rather main course, and coffee over the campfire or if you will prepare the main dishes at home before you start out—whether you is to be a combination of the two methods—part of the items prepared at home and part cooked or reheated over the campfire. In either case you will probably want a roaring fire to warm chilly fingers, and a bed of coals for toasting sandwiches or marshmallows.

Choose a sunny day and a good picnic spot for spreading the feast. And take along the things that are easiest to prepare. If there are men along, you might let them take charge of the broiling of the steak or frying the bacon and eggs. Most men like to display their skill at camp cooking, although at home cooking wouldn't interest them at all.

Mexican Sandwiches

You will like the hot sandwich spread used for Mexican sandwiches. Take along big buttered buns and let each person toast his bun over hot coals before adding the hot spread if he wishes. For sufficient mixture for twelve large buns, fry one-half pound of bacon in a frying pan until crisp. Remove and drain off half of the bacon fat. In that that remains, brown three-fourths of a cup of shredded dried beef. Add three-fourths cup hot chili sauce, then one-half cup grated American cheese and stir until the cheese is melted. Add one-third cup of sweet relish, pickles, a little over tightly and wrap well so the filling will stay hot until you reach the picnic grounds. Spread between buttered buns—toasted or not as you wish.

To ease the process of seedling plants, pour boiling water over the seeds first. Or put them in a shallow dish, then pour them to wash them in blossoms in the oven.

Take stale bread to remove the taste of raw vegetables. Rub the bread over the vegetables.

For a quick paper bag, cut a square piece of waxed paper to the size of a sandwich bag.

When eating rice add a little lemon juice, and the grains will not stick together. Incidentally, the lemon also acts as a bleach, so that rice to which it has been added will be white.

Prof. Pavlov Flaunts The Soviet . . . And They Tolerate Him

IT ISN'T OFTEN that a government rewards or punishes upon a man who is frankly opposed to its regime. Still, such a situation exists today in Russia and the man is Prof. Ivan Petrovitch Pavlov, 84 years old, and one of the oldest members of the Russian Academy of Science as well as the world's dean of physiology.

Pavlov is the son of a peasant and educated the Greek Orthodox Church. Under the present Soviet educational policy, a opponent of the system delicto to point out, Professor Pavlov would have been barred from an education and Russia, the world as well, would presumably have been poorer by one genius.

In answer to this argument, the Communists point to Pavlov's political opinions. "There," they say, "is tangible evidence of our contention that sons of priests usually turn out to be reactionaries." If they risk losing an occasional genius, they prefer that risk to what they consider the certainty of encouraging enemies in their midst.

PROFESSOR PAVLOV belongs distinctly to an older generation politically, although he has been for more than fifty years among the youngest in his field of endeavor. His is not of course, the first instance when iconoclasm in science is coupled with conservatism in politics.

Pravda, the official mouthpiece of the Communist Party, supplements its eulogy of the Professor, the professional physiologist, with an attack on Pavlov, the amateur sociologist.

Says the paper Pravda: "The history of science and of great men has proved more than once that it is necessary to distinguish clearly between the objective idea of scientific doctrine and the subjective feelings of its author. Unfortunately in the person of Pavlov we have an example when the objectively revolutionary spirit of a doctrine is followed by—let us say it straightforwardly—subjectively reactionary views on social problems."

On many occasions and on the last provocation, Professor Pavlov has charged "the destruction of cultural values by ignorant Communists" and condemned what he considered Soviet ill-treatment of men of science. He has never given his endorsement to the "class policy" in Soviet universities, which excludes the sons of former tsars, nobility, landlords, priests and the like.

More recently he was one of the very few Russian academics who voted openly against new members proposed by scientific organizations of the Soviet and opposed every effort the Soviet regime made to bring the Academy into line politically. Nevertheless, the Council of the USSR Commissars, on a recent birthday, made public an order appropriating 100,000 rubles to the Pavlov laboratory in Leningrad. All branches of the government were further instructed to collaborate in making the Pavlov researches as successful as possible. This unusual situation may be explained largely by the nature of Professor Pavlov's work.

The scientist's studies of "conditional reflexes" provide a materialistic explanation for many aspects of human behavior, especially with regard to the working of the human mind. Until his researches along these lines were revealed, idealism and religion were offered as explanations. One Moscow newspaper once explained it this way: "Professor Pavlov's work has abolished the soul."

Professor Pavlov himself will deny any such things, but his discoveries, to the Communists, are more eloquent than his beliefs.

FARM STRIKE SCHEDULED TO START TODAY

By UNITED PRESS

Members of the Farmers Holiday Association through midwestern states prepared last night for a farm strike to begin at noon today, encouraged by the statement of numerous public officials that relief for agriculture was needed.

President Roosevelt will make a radio address Sunday night. It was announced in Washington and political observers believed he would devote some attention in his speech to farm conditions.

Even the leaders of the farm strike regarded it only as a gesture but it served to bring the farmers' plight before the country. Currency reflation, high prices for farm products and NRA code for agriculture and a national moratorium on farm mortgage foreclosures are objects of the Holiday Association.

In North Dakota, members of the National Guard were ordered to use force if necessary to enforce grain embargoes proclaimed by the governor.

Four other governors, Charles W. Bryan, of Nebraska; Albert Schmedeman of Wisconsin; Clyde Herring of Iowa and Alf Landon of Kansas, issued statements expressing sympathy for the farmers in their pleas for better conditions.

Keith Neville, former governor of Nebraska, resigned as state NRA chairman there, in protest against phases of the recovery program.

Farmers had Sioux City, Iowa, stopped a foreclosure sale scheduled for today.

WHAT are the PURCHASING AGENTS DOING?

EVERY big company has one or more men whose entire time is devoted to buying the things which that company needs.

These men are specialists. It is their business to know prices . . . materials . . . sources of supply . . . present and future trends. They are the shrewdest, canniest buyers in the world.

But ALL of us, in a small way, are purchasing agents. We HAVE to buy a certain number of things, if only to keep alive. And most of us aren't very skillful at it. We waste a lot of money. We miss the good bargains. In fact, we could learn a great deal by watching a professional buyer at his work.

At this time, especially, it may be helpful to know what the big purchasing agents are doing. Are they cutting down? Are they opening up? Do they think this is a good time to buy or a bad time? What do they think about the future?

Well, the answer is that they are all buying as fast as they can buy.

And they are buying because THEY KNOW THAT PRICES ARE GOING UP.

"Pig iron has advanced 13 percent," the purchasing agent of a $20,000,000 corporation recently said. "Brass is up 42½ percent. I am paying 41 percent more for lumber than I did in March, and fiber packing cases have doubled in price.

In fact, everything we use in this business is costing us more today, and will in my opinion cost us still more tomorrow. I believe . . . that many commodities will be back to or near 1929 levels by spring."

That's the way the professional purchasing agents feel about it. And they KNOW. They have special sources of information. They are closely in touch with Industry. They have studied the workings of the NRA codes.

PRICES ARE GOING UP. And it's a good thing for everyone. For things had come to the point where NOTHING had any true value. A man's time . . . his product . . .

RECOGNITION OF RUSSIA IS PROBABLE

es tending to disturb . . . Peace . . . it was believed to have had reference to conditions in the Far East, where Russia's relations with Japan have been strained.

The President, in a letter dated October 10, said that from the beginning of his administration he had considered ending the "abnormal relations between the 125,000,000 people of the United States and the 160,000,000 people of Russia."

"It is most regrettable," he declared, "that these great peoples, between whom a happy tradition of friendship existed for more than a century to their mutual advantage should now be without a practical method of communicating directly with each other."

Apparently anxious to avoid commitments, Mr. Roosevelt said that the proposed talk would not "commit either nation to any further course of action, but would indicate a sincere desire to reach a satisfactory solution of the problem involved."

Kalinin, in reply, said that he, too, recognized the lack of relations between his country and the United States.

"There is no doubt," he said, "that differences, present or arising, between the two countries, can be solved only when direct relations exist between them; and that, on the other hand, they have no chance of solution in the absence of such relations."

ANNOUNCED TONIGHT.—Eighteen houses freed themselves of debts and started the fall quarter with cash in the bank. Tatum reported. Of the 24 fraternities, 18 houses are in almost perfect nities; only six have financial ob-his property . . . all had sunk so low in value that he couldn't even get a decent living.

That couldn't go on. So the Government set up the machinery of the NRA codes in order to MAKE EVERYTHING WORTH SOMETHING AGAIN.

This process is now under way. Wages are being raised. Commodities are bringing better prices every day. But it is not yet over. Before fair values . . . living values . . . can be reached, prices will have to go higher than they are now.

Before they do, take a leaf from the purchasing agent's book, and lay in a supply of the things you need. There are many good bargains still to be had. But these stocks are strictly limited. NOW IS THE TIME TO BUY.
